Blog Post: Highlights from “Silence as a Form of Classroom Participation”

By Susanne Shavelson
April 9, 2013

At the Mandel Center’s recent Teacher Forum, Kathy Schultz presented us with new ideas and practical advice about the role and meaning of silent students and silent classrooms. In this video we share highlights from her presentation. We also share clips Kathy presented from two different classroom settings. They show how two different students use their silence to participate and demonstrate their teachers’ strategies for supporting that participation.

https://vimeo.com/63592354

https://vimeo.com/63592357

https://vimeo.com/63592356